2026 - Selected works

Joana Amora (Rio de Janeiro, BR) develops living installations, images and participatory works through cultivation processes, organic matter and socio-ecological engagement. Since 2017, her practice has intertwined agroecology, sculpture and social research, investigating food systems, migration, ecological transformation, care and the relationships between human and non-human forms of life within territories shaped by colonial and extractive histories.

Working through walking, collecting, planting and long-term collaborations with natural processes, she creates situations where plants, fungi, bodies and social structures continuously transform one another over time.

Amora holds a BA in Visual Arts (Sculpture), graduated summa cum laude from the School of Fine Arts of Rio de Janeiro, and completed an international exchange in Arts Plastiques at Aix-Marseille Université. She also holds an MA in Information and Communication from Université de Haute-Alsace (FR). Her work has been presented in Brasil, France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland and Turkey, including projects at the Venice Biennale, Municipal Centre of Art Hélio Oiticica, Parque Lage and FABRIKculture. She has participated in residency programmes including Revoada (Italy), Echangeur22 (France), Terra UNA (Brasil), and K2 Urla Nefes Alam (Turkey). She is currently involved in the Creative Europe programmes MATCH – The Mediterranean as the Climate Hotspot and CLIMART-D, and is a recipient of a Culture Moves Europe mobility grant.

Gıda Toplulukları (Food Communities), 2026 — Photography series, videoart documentary — Variable dimensions — K2 Urla Nefes Alanı residency, Urla, İzmir, Turkey

Developed during the MATCH EU (The Mediterranean as the Climate Hotspot) European Creative residency programme, Gıda Toplulukları (Food Communities) investigates ecological food circulation, agricultural systems and endemic edible species in the İzmir region. Through visits to farms, ecological markets and community-supported agriculture networks, the project explores how local agriculture and food practices shape landscapes, ecosystems and collective ways of nourishing society.

Trepantes (Climbers), 2025 — Beans, soil, clay pots, water, leds, wire and time — Living Installation 2,3 x 2 m x 3m x 3 months— Abri Mémoire, Uffholtz, France

Planting Water, 2025-(ongoing) — Urban agroforest, impact documentary, XR environment, participatory workshops, online platform — UFRJ, Rio de Janeiro, Brasil

Planting Water Project is a multidisciplinary and ecosystemic artwork proposing the expansion of an urban agroforestry system initiated by students in Rio de Janeiro, Brasil. It aims to regenerate microclimates, restore freshwater cycles, and reimagine urban landscapes through collective ecological practices.

The ongoing project combines artistic practice, agroecology, and information science through the development of audiovisual, photographic, data and sound-based documentation, including portraying participants involved in the creation and maintenance of the agroforest.

It explores, under construction, the creation of an extended reality environment, a platform for collective memory, including the mapping of plant species and the development of a database tracing how the local microclimate has been transformed through human intervention and agroecological processes.

Carrapixações, 2020/2021 — Sticky seeds (Desmodium adscendens) on fabric.

The Carrapixação series is a neologism in Portuguese for 'Carrapichos' (sticky seeds) + pixação (graffiti). Sticky seeds are plants that have a micro-political tactic for propagation. They are found on the clothes of those who go into the forests and countryside, creating textile compositions. The work reflects nature's micro-political strategies for propagating ideas and marking territory.

Grafite-Musgo (Moss Graffiti), 2020 — Documentation of a land art intervention using moss on an urban wall. Pigment print mounted on Plexi (collage technique), 120 × 90 cm. Edition of 5 + 1 A.P. — Realised at Parque Lage, Rio de Janeiro, Brasil.

View from Unbound Realms exhibition, FABRIKculture, Hégenheim, FR.

Grafite-Musgo is a living painting made by an earth-and-flour-based glue and collected moss from Tijuca Forest. Created at the border of the world's largest urban forest and the city, it invites Nature to break into the urban territory.

Carrapixações, 2022— Sticky seeds (Desmodium adscendens) on fabric — 20 × 20 cm — Seeds collected at Sítio Santa Fé, Areal, RJ, Brasil

The Secret Pavilion is a decolonial impact documentary initiated during the 2024 Venice Art Biennale, in collaboration with indigenous artists from Colombia and Brasil. The film follows collective rituals and actions for the restitution of sacred objects held in European museums, invited by Célia Tupinambá. It is part of the REVOADA project, held in collaboration with 'Plan D', 'Minga Decolonial' and Ministry of Culture of Colombia, and expands across cities such as Venice, Basel, Berlin, Madrid, and Bogotá.

Documentary in collaboration with Carolina Leal.

Nicknamed Garden I, the Agroecological-Sensory Experimentation I proposes that art goes beyond the visual and the static — and that gardens go beyond the esthetic and the monocultural.

The garden invites passers-by to plant, harvest, eat, smell, listen, touch, and imagine how it will be in the future.

It is a meditative environment that welcomes its visitors as primordial elements of the landscape. Through an agroforestry system, edible, medicinal, and useful plants were planted collaboratively. The garden was lived in and cared for over the course of two years.

Visits and observations were recorded on his Tumblr:

This protocol installation explores the pillars of magic: Home, World, and Atelier.

Developed during my first artistic residency at the Terra UNA Ecovillage in Brasil, the project recreates my living environment through a tent filled with objects, plants, and memories.

First presented as A Casa da Maga in 2020 and later in France expanded in Chez la Magicienne (2023), the work invites visitors to enter an intimate, ever-changing world — a personal mythology made of natural elements, human traces, and collective imagination. Each installation becomes an open space for encounters, sharing, and play.

Nouvelles Façons d'Habiter la Société Humaine, 2024 — Video performance triptych [\[link available\]](#): HD color videos, stereo sound, 1080 × 1920p, continuous loop —
Filmed in Berlin (DE), Paraty & Rio de Janeiro (BR)

Nouvelles Façons d'Habiter la Société Humaine is a series of video and photographic self-portraits reflecting on the experience of migration from an autofiction perspective. In these works, the human body attempts to integrate into human landscapes.

When I first landed alone on a new planet in 2022, in Europe, I encountered its natives and began to understand the social rules in place. My first instinct: to adapt. With time and space, I learned to play with the strangeness of relations and explore new ways of inhabiting human society. Emerging through experiences of stereotyping, judgment and hypersexualization, the work reflects tensions surrounding migration between the Global South and North.

Untitled (from the Nouvelles Façons d'Habiter la Société Humaine series), 2022 — Photoperformance: printed on Hahnemühle Hemp 290g— 75 × 50 cm — Aix-en-Provence, France — Edition 1/7 + 2 A.P.

My nests consist of building houses and flying away.
And building new nests, wherever I fly to.

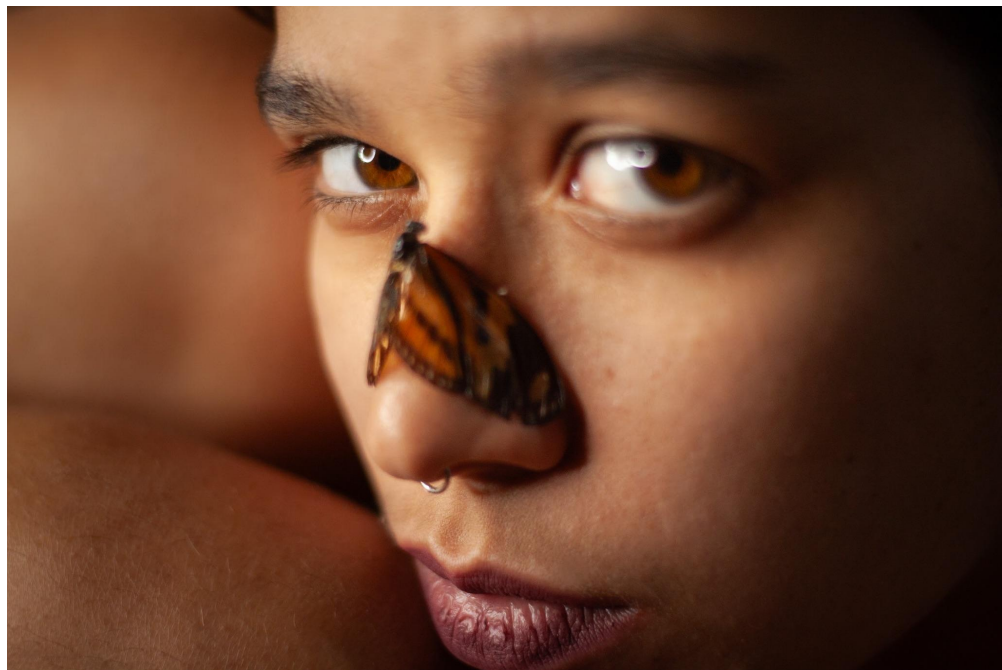

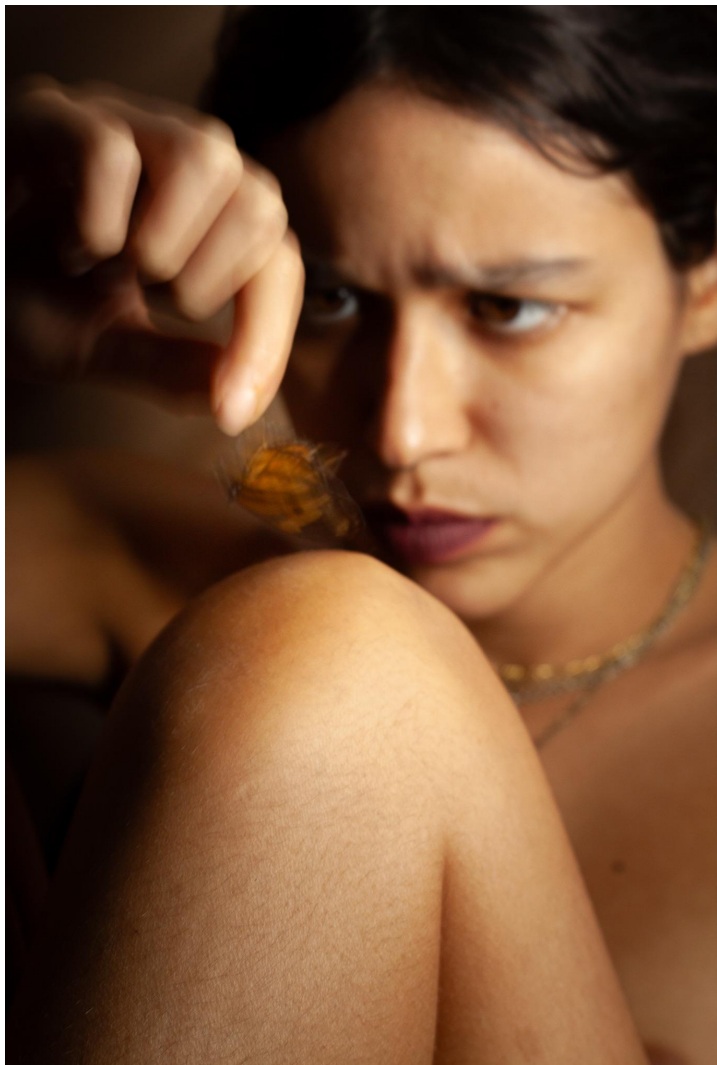

This series begins with the insecurities of a young girl in 2021. It develops from my experience of immigrating to Europe, living in France and Germany

Niños means ‘children’ in Spanish, but is pronounced the same as Ninhos in Portuguese, which means ‘nests’. The name of the project plays with the idea of giving birth to nests, but also of being welcomed by them.

Part of the ongoing series Trepantes.

From a clandestine gesture (planting a passion fruit vine on a building's iron grid), this living sculpture embodied growth, resilience, and quiet resistance. Over three years, it became a living story of my garden: producing over 20 fruits picked prematurely by passers-by, being eat by caterpillars, until removed by the official gardener. This experiment inspired further sculptural works exploring dialogues between human intention and natural processes.
